

Highlights

- Secretary-inspired rules stop feature-level CART split search early.
- Exact-feature stopping is the most conservative cross-task secretary rule.
- Extremely randomized trees save more time but incur greater loss.
- Classification entries meet task-specific constraints more often.
- Secretary splitters warrant matched bagging experiments.